rade deficit decreased

Financial markets cheer

ASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's trade t eased to $14.1 billion in September, the gov- ent reported Thursday in statistics that sug- d the U.S. import-export picture was bright- even before the stock market crash.

e report, marking the lowest trade shortfall in months, touched off a rally in the financial ets.

e Commerce Department said the merchan- trade deficit, the gap between imports and ts, decreased by a strong $1.6 billion in Sep- er from the $15.7 billion level of August.

e Dow Jones industrial average surged 69 s by early afternoon while the dollar, which unk to new 40-year lows earlier in the week, d strongly in New York, rising more than 1 n value to 136.35 yen. It also was sharply r against European currencies.

hough much of the trade improvement came a decline in oil imports, imports of manufac- goods also fell while exports of U.S.-made icts rose sharply.

onomists took this as a sign that the long- ed turnabout in trade accounts from a declin- dollar may have finally begun, and that it started weeks before the Oct. 19 stock market collapse.

A lower-valued dollar makes imports more expensive and U.S. goods more competitive abroad. However, in the past the decline in the dollar against other major currencies — more than 40 percent since mid-1985 had shown little direct impact on the monthly trade figures.

"Two and a half years after the dollar peaked, we are finally seeing an effect on both imports and exports," said Robert Wescott, chief economist for Alphametrics, a Philadelphia forecasting service.

Last month's disappointing report on the August trade deficit, which showed a smaller-than-anticipated improvement from the $16.5 billion shortfall in July, has been widely cited as one of the factors that helped trigger the stock market collapse.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the new figures were "especially encouraging" because they included a gain in the export of manufactured goods. "These numbers should be received well," he said.

The trade report, the best since a $14 billion deficit in May, showed an improvement with all of the nation's major trading partners except Canada.

Imports declined to $35.1 billion from $35.9 billion in August, while exports rose over the same period from $20.2 billion to $21 billion.

Imports of petroleum products dropped to $3.9 billion from $4.7 billion in August. Oil prices are not directly affected by changes in the value of the dollar because oil is sold in international markets for dollars.

But imports of manufactured goods, which are sensitive to dollar fluctuations, fell to $26.6 billion, down from $26.9 billion. Exports of U.S.-manufactured goods, meanwhile, were up $1.1 billion to $14.8 billion.

Analysts cautioned against reading too much into a single month's figures. And, for the first nine months of 1987, the trade deficit was still amassing at an annual rate of $166.9 billion, larger than the record $156.2 billion deficit in 1986.

The U.S. deficit with Japan decreased to $4.6 billion from $4.9 billion in August. The trade shortfall with Western Europe also fell to $1.7 billion from $2.5 billion.

But the trade gap with Canada, the largest single U.S. trading partner, rose in September to $1.3 billion from a $939 million shortfall a month earlier.

North Orem flooding eliminated by new dam

By CONNIE ANDERSEN
Universe Staff Writer

North Orem residents will no longer be plagued by flooding from runoff on Mt. Timpanogos, according to an Orem City official.

Jack Jones, director of public works, said a $85,000 dam and retention basin has been completed at the mouth of Dry Canyon to temporarily hold water which has run freely off the mountain since a fire destroyed shrubs and ground cover.

The 250-foot by 550-foot basin will hold approximately five million gallons of water, or the amount of water in Orem's three storage tanks. The dam is 15 feet high and 230 feet long, Jones said.

The basin has a 24-inch outlet pipe which is open continually, so the basin does not usually fill. "I doubt if water will ever go over the top of the dam," said Jones.

"We never had a problem until that fire occurred," he said. After the flood, Heatheridge Subdivision in north Orem flooded after each rainstorm.

According to Paul Skabelund, a Uinta National Forest Service watershed specialist, Orem City worked with Uinta National Forest Service personnel to build the dam and basin. It is built as a temporary protection, until it's determined that the watershed has returned to normal, he said.

Approximately $1 million worth of homes and a Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints chapel were in danger of being flooded in north Orem after the fire, he said.

Skabelund said Heatheridge Subdivision is built on a flood plain which is not a safe place to build. "I wondered why people were building on a flood plain, but I wasn't in a position to do anything about it. It was a place I wouldn't have build a house myself," he said.

Houses in Rock Canyon in Provo are also in jeopardy, Skabelund said. "People should have flood insurance if they're going to build in those locations.

"Right now the federal government is discouraging people from building on flood plains," he said. When something like the fire and flooding occurs, the government has to pay. "The fire will cost close to half a million dollars before it's all over," Skabelund said.

According to Brian Brady, an official of the Soil Conservation Service, federal emergency watershed money came from the Soil Conservation Service to the Uinta National Forest Service to pay for the project.

Skabelund said the burned area on the mountain was reseeded by helicopter with eight tons of alfalfa, clover and grass seed, costing $35,000. The operation was begun on Sept. 28, but temporarily delayed when the seeder was accidentally dropped from the helicopter after a wrong button was pushed. Seeding was finished on Oct. 2, he said.

Approximately 1,100 acres were reseeded. Twelve hundred and seventy acres were burned in the fire. Skabelund said some of the north-face of the slope was not reseeded because it wasn't damaged too badly.

Utah Division of Wildlife Resources personnel chained approximately 300 acres of the area that have a gentle slope, using two tractors with a chain between them, to try and cover the seed and keep it from blowing or washing away, said Skabelund.

"What you see up there now is mostly the oak brush starting to sprout and some of the native grass. If you get up close, there is still a lot of bare ground," he said.

Skabelund said water from a storm on Oct. 13 filled the retention basin, although it was not completed at the time. "It probably prevented additional damage in Orem," he said.

Educators told 'no money'

Gov. Bangerter says state unable to increase budget

By GORDON SCOTT
Universe Staff Writer

Gov. Norman H. Bangerter told educators Thursday the state would not be able to provide new monetary resources in the near future.

"We're not going to be able to give you new resources, in money, for the short term," said Bangerter.

The governor spoke to members of the Utah Association of Financial Aid Administration and explained the financial state of education in Utah.

He cited several statistics in an effort to "put things in perspective" concerning financial aid for education. He mentioned that the Gramm-Rudman-Hollings Act will reduce federal expenditures by at least $23 billion.

"We have not calculated (the impact of reductions) in any of our budget preparations," Bangerter said.

He reminded the educators that the state has been reallocating funds from other programs to raise the level of funding for education.

"We've reallocated ... to enhance education funding from 52 to 70 percent of the operating budget over the last three budgets," Bangerter said.

The governor also said that demographics has a great influence on educational needs in Utah. He cited statistics showing Utah currently has 52 school-age children for every 100 adults under age 65, while the national average was 30 children per 100 adults. This represents a 23 percent increase since 1980, he added.

"Tax protesters are a real force," said Bangerter. "I think they are well meaning but misinformed."

Legislators have a numbers game to deal with here in Utah. "From the numbers I've seen, we are within the top eight states in the country (economically). We just have this formula situation where we have so many people to educate that it eats up much of that money."

Bangerter said that high taxes may worry some potential employers looking to locate in Utah. "If you look at our tax structure, it must be conceded that we are above the average. That's because of our kids."

> "If you look at our tax structure, it must be conceded that we are above the average. That's because of our kids."
> Gov. Norm Bangerter

To show the other side of the coin, Bangerter related an incident in which he recently spoke with a high official of a local business firm. The governor was concerned about rumors that the firm might relocate.

Bangerter said the official reported the firm had not planned to move but instead was planning expansion, since Utahns are a more productive work force than in other areas.

The governor said that in spite of an economically challenging year, "I remain optimistic about the future of education."

Recently, he assigned two committees to determine methods by which schools could make resources go further. Of these suggestions made by these committees, one idea has interested the governor most. "We are thinking of implementing block grant funding," said Bangerter.

This would mean certain school districts would be granted their funding in one block amount for the districts to allocate as efficiently as possible. According to the School Finance Incentives Committee, this would allow for greater efficiency of allocation than the current system of legislative mandate.

ameron said he felt the 200-plus stion survey was too long, that e questions were too explicit and "the most troublesome thing to me are the 75 to 100 questions at the end of the questionnaire about interpersonal family relationships.

"I just think we're asking for a lot of information that we can't use."

The survey was written by Chris Wallace and Joseph Olsen, who work as consultants in the Office of Legislative Research, said Sen. Stephen J. Rees, R-Utah, chairman of the Governor's Task Force on Teenage Pregnancy Prevention.

The two BYU graduate students incorporated input from the 11 members of the task force and came up with a comprehensive questionnaire, according to Rees.

"We feel like we need to understand the problem, understand the values that kids have and where they're coming from," he said. "We feel it's important to have current, up-to-date information to base our program on.

President Benson improving

Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints President Ezra Taft Benson is doing fine and feeling better each day after suffering a mild heart attack on Oct. 15.

According to Church spokesman Jerry P. Cahill, President Benson is "expected back to his normal duties in the next several weeks."

At press time, the date President Benson will be back resuming his duties was not known.

President Benson is "meeting regularly with his counselors" under his doctor's direction, said Cahill.

At this time he has not resumed any other activities, Cahill added. President Benson has been faithful at following his doctor's prescribed walking exercises.

According to a news release, President Benson has expressed "great appreciation for the tenderness and concern shared with him and his family in get well cards and letters from friends worldwide."

President Benson was in the hospital for 10 days after the heart attack. Since his release he has been improving daily.

hile the United Nations predicts nating and declining economies in underdeveloped countries in an economic forecast, a BYU economist advises a need for entrepreneurship and private investment in the Third World.

"I believe that we ought to be working around the world to eradicate trade barriers, to stimulate the economies of the Third World," said B. Delworth Gardner, BYU professor of economics.

According to the U.N. report, Third World economies are expected to grow at a rate of about 2.7 percent in 1987 and 1988, the same as in 1986.

Gardner said the massive foreign aid and expenditures contributed by the Western democracies have done little to help local economies.

Instead, they weaken development, capital formation and the development of markets in these countries.

"It would be more helpful to push economic development in these countries. We have to rely on multi-national corporations that have moved their operations there (underdeveloped nations) to take advantage of low cost in production in these areas," said Gardner.

He said "the record of foreign aid is not very encouraging in terms of increasing economic wealth in the Third World. Private market activity has been more favorable, especially in Asia."

The U.N. Secretariat's outlook sees little hope of relief for Third World debtor nations, saying debt will continue to be excessive for many developing countries until the early 1990s.

"The big American banks have taken some preliminary steps to litigate the damage (to the American economy) by simply writing off some of these loans because they don't think they will be paid back in dollars, as was agreed," said Gardner.

"But what the American banks want is equity in the countries that have the debt.

"It remains to be seen whether the Brazilians or Mexicans will turn over equity in their economies and business to the American banks in repayment for these loans," said Gardner.

He said many people think "the crush of the stock market is the first indication that we are slipping into a recession."

Gardner went on to say the economic implications of the stock market have had world-wide impact.

While New York is thousands of miles away from Mexico, the economic impact of the crash has been felt south of the border, especially in the tourist industry, said Juan Jose Bravo Medina, a Mexico City travel agent.

"Nobody has felt it here (the crash of the stock market) more than the tourist industry by the decline of tourist flow from the United States," said Medina.

Ortega has a 'concrete' cease-fire plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nicaraguan President Daniel Ortega, after talks with House speaker Jim Wright, said Thursday he has come up with a "concrete proposal" for achieving a cease-fire with the Contra rebels.

Ortega, here for a meeting of the Organization of American States, told reporters he will announce his plan on Friday.

There were stong hints that the proposal would include a role for Wright in the efforts to reach a cease-fire, but Ortega said he could not provide details because "we're still refining all of this."

As Ortega spoke, Nicaraguan Cardinal Miguel Obando y Bravo, who has been designated intermediary in pending cease-fire talks between the Sandinista forces and the Contras, was heading for Washington and was expected to take part in the Friday announcement.

Congressional sources said last week that Wright had declined an offer to serve as a cease-fire intermediary between the Sandinistas and the Contras because he did not have the time and felt that such a role was inappropriate for someone outside of Central America.

But meetings Wednesday and Thursday between Wright, D-Texas, and Ortega left the impression that the speaker may have agreed to play a role in the cease-fire efforts.

Last week, Wright said he might be willing to send a congressional delegation to Nicaragua to verify the cease-fire.

Kennedy wins support from Jesse Helms

WASHINGTON (AP) — Supreme Court nominee Anthony M. Kennedy won the support of former opponent Jesse Helms Thursday in a day of White House peacemaking sessions, free of the bitterness that followed President Reagan's previous two nominations.

"I think he'll make a fine member of the Supreme Court," Helms, R-N.C., an outspoken member of the Senate's conservative wing, told reporters after meeting separately with Reagan and with the federal appellate judge.

Late last month, after the Senate voted down Reagan nominee Robert H. Bork, Kennedy was considered the front-runner for the court vacancy until Helms said there was no way he would support a Kennedy nomination and other conservatives also indicated displeasure. Reagan then nominated Douglas H. Ginsburg, who withdrew last weekend after admitting past marijuana use.

The president also met with Democrat Joseph R. Biden Jr., chairman of the Judiciary Committee, as Kennedy made courtesy calls on senators.

Storm Thursday plagues Boston area

BOSTON (AP) — Near-blizzard conditions plagued the Boston area on Thursday, dumping up to a foot of snow and closing Logan Airport, but sun and seasonable temperatures melted the snow piled up elsewhere by back-to-back storms blamed for 20 deaths.

Among the victims of the blustery storms was a 5-month-old boy who died Thursday after spending the night with his homeless parents in a car in New Britain, Conn. Three homeless people died in the South.

Near Washington, D.C., the Woodrow Wilson Bridge across the Potomac on Interstate 95 was closed for more than 12 hours, causing heavy traffic tie-ups, until Thursday afternoon because snow plows were unable to maneuver around hundreds of abandoned vehicles. Maryland state police reported towing 150 vehicles.

Freezing temperatures gripped the South early Thursday. Eight cities or towns from Texas to Virginia broke or tied their low temperature record for the day.

In Boston, weather service officials said the storm, driven by winds up to 50 mph, dumped almost a foot of snow in the western suburb of Marlboro.

Alzheimer's may begin early in life

WASHINGTON (AP) — Alzheimer's disease usually is diagnosed among the elderly, but a Florida researcher says his studies with laboratory rats show the process of mental decline may start during the vigorous years of early adulthood.

Gary W. Arendash, a scientist at the University of South Florida, said the long-term effect of chemical lesions on specific brain sites in rats resulted after 14 months in physical and mental symptoms that mimic those of Alzheimer's disease in humans.

He said the rats, because of their compressed life expectancy when compared with humans, developed the full-blown Alzheimer's symptoms in what to them would be an advanced age.

"This may suggest that the destructive changes in Alzheimer's may be under way for several decades before memory loss or other symptoms are evident," Arendash said. This means the disease, detected sixth decade of life, may be the result of a much earlier process.

Ruptured gas line slows morning traffic

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — A ruptured natural gas line spewed potentially explosive vapors for 2 and one-half hours Thursday, snarling morning rush-hour traffic along a primary interstate exchange before crews repaired it, authorities said.

The gas leak, reported at 7:30 a.m., was shut off by 10 a.m. and Mountain Fuel Supply Co. workers completed repairs by noon. However, repair work on an adjacent broken water line took until 2 p.m., said Mountain Fuel spokeswoman Louise Jacobsen.

Salt Lake City Chief Fire Dispatcher Jerry Evans said traffic had been allowed to resume along Redwood Road, which had been closed from 2100 South to 2200 South earlier.

"Everything's back to normal," he said.

Closure of the road, located where several interstates and arterials converge, had backed up motorists coming to work in the city for several miles.

Repair of the 6-inch gas line took longer than usual because the pipe was made of stainless steel rather than plastic, Evans said. Fire Capt. Gordon Nicholl said that at no time during the gas leak was there a danger of explosion.

The weather Friday calls for partly cloudy skies. Highs in the 50's and lows in the mid 30's. For the weekend it's cloudy skies and scattered thundershowers tapering off by Sunday.

Death sentence appeal responded to by state

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — William Andrews' claim that he was convicted and sentenced to death 13 years ago because of racial prejudice is based on misstatements and contentions disproved by the record, the state argues in a brief to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The brief sent by Assistant Attorney General Earl Dorius late Tuesday was in response to Andrews' third appeal to the Supreme Court.

Prosecutors believe that if the court refuses to hear the appeal, Andrews could be executed by lethal injection early next year.

Dorius said Andrews' attorney, Timothy Ford, raises numerous new issues, sometimes misstating statutes and facts of the case.

"He's making everything he can think of into a racial issue really for the first time," Dorius said. "Some of what he's offering now for the first time is blatantly false."

Andrews also has filed a motion for a writ of habeas corpus in 3rd District Court contending the Utah Supreme Court mistakenly dismissed his claim that the judge in his trial failed to properly instruct the jury.

Andrews and Pierre Dale Selby were sentenced to death for the torture slayings of three people during the April 22, 1974, robbery of the Hi Fi Shop in Ogden. Two other victims were tortured but survived attempts to kill them. Selby was executed by lethal injection Aug. 28.

Ford, of Seattle, contended in the appeal that Andrews' rights to a fair trial and due process were denied based on several factors at the trial that resulted in racial bias.

prevent teen pregnancy," explained Rees. "But we also hope to discourage or prevent early sexual activity."

The committee plans to administer the survey in January. "We hope to have a proposal and recommendations by next year," Rees said. The committee wants to design a program that teaches universal values and involves work that a student can take home and discuss with his parents.

"We hope it will be designed in such a way to help parents better communicate with their young people," Rees said.

The task force plans to survey between 1,000 and 1,200 students in 13 of the state's 40 school districts. Eight of the selected districts have approved the survey, three have refused and two are still considering the issue, said Rees.

"All we're asking is to let us contact parents to see if they're willing to allow students to take the survey," Rees said. "We want to know where teens are coming from. We've used good researchers. We think we've developed reliable questions."

Some of the questions in the survey ask students if they have ever had sexual intercourse, where they had it for the first time, what it did to their relationship, and if they know what the word "contraceptive" means.

Former 'Y' student dies playing ball

A 22-year-old former BYU student died Wednesday night while playing basketball at the Orem 21st ward chapel of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Robert Beckstrand, 674 N. 350 South, Orem, was with friends and his brother, Michael, 15, when he complained of a headache. He then collapsed and was taken to Utah Valley Regional Medical Center where he was pronounced dead. An autopsy was conducted and the coronary report listed no reason for death.

Beckstrand attended BYU Winter Semester and Spring Term of 1987. He majored in general education and was currently enrolled at Utah Valley Community College.

According to LDS Bishop Kenneth Anderson, Beckstrand was in excellent physical condition. He added that Beckstrand had been lifting weights prior to the incident.

Funeral services will be Monday at 2 p.m. in the LDS 21st ward chapel, 50 S. 780 West in Orem.

Journalists lost credibility, says editor

RI HARDY
rse Staff Writer

rnalists have lost credibility, ac- g to a former editor of the ian Science Monitor.

n Hughes, speaking at the Com- tations Department symposium day, said, "The public smells ption in the power of the press." credibility of the press began de during the Watergate era, Hughes. The pendulum of investive reporting took off during this ople had ambivalent feelings by nd (of Watergate) and felt the lent had behaved very badly eserved to go. Investigating ook off from there and the pendulum swang out too far, to the point that Kay Grahm of the Washington Post, whose paper had started it, began to condemn the zeal," Hughes said.

"There was a tremendous focus on investigative reporting. I think for a while people reached the point where no one believed anything the government told them," he said. "An extreme denigration of government institutions occurred.

"I think it's healthy to be skeptic, but when it degenerates to total cynicism we're in deep trouble," he added.

"Reporters were intruding into private lives. Public officials, under a cloud, had 50 television cameras peering into their bedrooms. It really got pretty tacky and the public got disaffected by all of this," said Hughes.

The American Society of Newspapers began to do research on how this was affecting the reader, he said. They came up with some very interesting information. The research found that readers felt papers and reporters were not representing people, but their own selfish interests. Reporters and editors were perceived as being remote, arrogant and motivated through self interest in the pursuit of newspaper glory.

"The loyalty of a newspaper is to its readers. We need to go the extra mile," he said. "I have never understood the reluctance of editors to print corrections." There is a problem of what should be put in the papers, he said. It is a question of taste, fairness and national security.

Do you print the picture of the school bus accident with a long shot or a close up of the injured children? The answer to this seems obvious, but what about the senator who is drunk on the senate floor or the wife of a senator who is an alcoholic? The answer is not as easy.

"All of us in the business have to keep demanding higher quality of journalism," he said.

Cadets battle in sports competitions

By CLAIN UDY and CAROL ANN BEETON
Universe Staff Writers

The Army ROTC cadets faced the cadets from the Air Force in a friendly battle on the playing fields of BYU, but who the champions are depends on who you ask.

"The Army always beats the Air Force when it comes to physical things," said Doug Weatherford, a senior Army cadet from Statesboro, Ga., majoring in Spanish.

"This is the first year in five years that the Army has beat the Air Force," said Dean Lee, a senior Air Force cadet from Orem majoring in cartography, "but it is a friendly rivalry."

"We always like beating the Air Force. That's the facts, right? And we can't be embarrassed about facts," said Rick Heywood, a senior Army cadet from Juneau, Alaska, majoring in political science.

Such was the consensus among cadets.

Lee said they are taught to be competitive as cadets and this training leads to an intense, friendly rivalry.

Thursday's basketball game wrapped up this week's round of Army vs. Air Force sports competitions. The Army cadets won a majority of the competitions. The events included football, soccer, a bell race, basketball and ultimate Frisbee.

This winning streak is especially dramatic, according to Air Force Capt. Morgan, because the Air Force traditionally wins the majority of events. In nine out of 11 years the Air Force has won the basketball trophy, including last year, said Morgan. Last year's triathalon Iron Man trophy, however, was taken by the Army.

"We try to keep a healthy rivalry," he said.

FORUM ASSEMBLY

Tuesday, November 17, 11 a.m., Marriott Center

WILLIAM BARCLAY ALLEN

Professor of Government
Harvey Mudd College / Claremont Graduate School

"The Constitution to End All Constitutions: The Descent of the American Constitution."

"In my Forum address I will discuss the background and principles of the American Constitution. Drawing upon the work of the Founders themselves, I present their claim to having wrought new terms of human association, designed to vindicate mankind's capacity for self-government. Reflecting on the contemporary significance of their accomplishment, we entertain the 'original intention' debate, arguing that neither the 'living Constitution' school nor the 'stick-to-the-text' school fully captures the meaning of limited government. In the end, the Constitution works to the precise extent that it guides a virtuous, self-governing people."

Selected readings are available in the Reserve Library under: William B. Allen / Forum Assemblies.

Question-and-Answer Session at 12 noon in the Varsity Theater.

Utah Symphony debuts local's work

By TERRY L. JONES
Universe Staff Writer

The world premiere of an "up and coming" composer's Utah-inspired work will be featured at the Utah Symphony's concert Saturday at BYU, according to a recent press release.

David Froom, assistant professor of composition and theory at the University of Utah, "wrote this piece and dedicated it to Joseph Silverstein and the symphony," said publicist Robin Purvin.

The premiere's title, "Down to A Sunless Sea: A Rhapsody for String Orchestra," was taken from Samuel Taylor Coleridge's poem "Kubla Khan." Because the poem's opening stanza "evokes a sense of mystery which I was trying to evoke in my music," said Froom.

According to Froom, parts of the poem also "bring to mind ... the feeling I get when I'm standing in, say Little Cottonwood Canyon," and see the river "crashing down to the Great Salt Lake," he said.

His music is performed about five to 10 times a year "throughout the United States and some in Europe."

Besides Froom's premiere, Schubert's Rondo in A major for violin and strings, Dvorak's Romance in F minor for violin and orchestra will be performed on Saturday.

Haydn's Violin Concerto No. 3 in A major will be featured as well.

Maestro Silverstein will be solo violinist for each, said Purvin.

The last work, Haydn's Trumpet Concerto in E flat major, will feature Edmund Cord, principal trumpet in the symphony. "It's a big showpiece," said Purvin.

This concert, part of a series the symphony does at BYU, is one of the 10 to 12 performances they give each year.

"We have a particular mandate to travel through this part of the country," said Purvin.

She also added that the the Utah Symphony has gone on only six international tours during the "40 some odd years" it has been in existence.

Van Goghs costly

NEW YORK (AP) — Vincent van Gogh's "Irises," the famous depiction of a flower garden at an asylum the painter entered shortly before he committed suicide, sold Wednesday for a record $53.9 million.

The identity of the buyer, who bid by telephone, was not immediately disclosed.

The previous record for a painting was set by another van Gogh masterpiece, "Sunflowers," which sold for $39.9 million earlier this year to a Japanese insurance company.

Two 'Y' choirs to perform

The BYU Singers and the Concert Choir will present "An Autumn Evening of Song" on Nov. 13 at 7:30 p.m. in the de Jong Concert Hall, HFAC.

According to a press release, the concert will allow the groups to "present a full spectrum of fine music from the late renaissance era through today's music."

Ronald Staheli, director of the 40 University Singers said, "In my opinion, we've assembled some of the best choral music ever written. My goal is to offer them in a way that the selections go beyond being 'museum pieces' into the realm where they speak of beauty, life and art."

A member of the Singers, Eda Ashby said she has sung in various other choirs "but none in which the sensitive musicality was combined with such intensity of communication, both from the choir to the audience and within the choir itself."

The Singers will perform three Italian madrigals by Monteverdi, written during the renaissance period. These will be contrasted with three madrigals from the 20th century, the press release said.

Staheli said the Concert Choir will perform first, followed by the Singers. The musical selections performed by each are stylistically different, but Staheli said, "We choose music that would correlate well."

According to Mack Wilberg, who directs the 100 member Concert Choir, their program includes such works as "Three Shakespeare Songs," by Vaughn Williams, "Three Childhood Lyrics," by John Rutter and also a few spirituals.

"These works are not to be admired form afar. Their real value is in the direct way they can be appreciated," Wilberg said.

Talking about the Singers' program, Staheli said, "People will hear that although the music uses a little different harmonic language, their real approach is the same. All have a wonderful text that is highly poetic and artistic."

Ashby said, "In many choirs the music is beautifully expressed, but with this group, the music is not only beautifully expressed, it is lived."

Tickets for Friday evening's performance are available at the ticket office in the Harris Fine Arts Center.

Dance Ensemble performs tonight

It's quirky. It's sensitive. It's dramatic. It's dancing. It's "Dimensions."

Dance Ensemble will perform a variety of modern dances in "Dimensions." Friday at 7:30 p.m. in 185 RB.

A combination of undergraduate, graduate and faculty will present their works. "The students have come up with new and refreshing ideas," said Caroline Prohosky, artistic director and advisor of Dance Ensemble.

Dance themes range from romance to facinating visual images. All costumes were specially designed for each piece.

Among the works to be performed is Prohosky's "Chysidiria."

YU defeats West Berlin

RIC GOODELL
Sports Editor

BYU basketball team had few problems in con- ıg the West Berlin Select team last night at the ott Center, winning the game 107-78.

U seemingly had control of the game from the start. the opening tip-off BYU center Jim Usevitch tipped ll to teammate Michael Smith, who then threw the Marty Haws, who was speeding toward the basket. o points. An easy layup.

m there, BYU overpowered the smaller, slower Berlin team. The Cougars relied on the fast break to score to 42-22 with 4:33 to play in the first half.

m here, the Cougar offense went to sleep, almost ıg the 13,200 fans attending the game to sleep in the ss.

st Berlin was able to get back to 52-41 on a last-sec- asket by West Berlin's Thomas Neis.

at the BYU offense lacked at the end of the first half, de up for it at the beginning of the second half. The se started to find ways to penetrate the West Berlin-

Cougars went on a remarkable tear, upping the to 71-48, at which time West Berlin called a time out. viously the BYU coaches were happy. When the BYU players strolled over to their bench with their 23-point lead and sat down in a disorganized fashion, it prompted assistant coach Roger Reid to say, "We got to get organized — players, sit over there!"

Andersen said of the Cougar run, "It was picturesque as far as up-tempo basketball."

Andersen commented he was pleased that many of his freshmen players got their feet wet in the contest. "Actually, they got them kind of damp tonight," he said.

West Berlin Coach Rick Shore thought the Cougars beat his team on the transition game and on rebounding.

"BYU did everything it had to do to beat us by 28 points," he said.

Senior Jeff Chatman lead the Cougar scoring with 23 points. Smith, who sat out much of the game due to foul trouble, finished with 21.

Chatman also had 14 rebounds.

West Berlin's John Dronsella scored 33 points.

Shore commented that his team has been hurt by injuries, having several top players out. Forward Nils Madden of West Berlin, a key player for the team, left the game with only four minutes gone in the first half.

Shore conceded, however, "I don't know if we could beat them even with a full team."

Before the game began, the teams exchanged gifts. BYU players gave the West Berlin team Levi jackets.

BYU X-country teams in action this weekend

The BYU men's and women's cross country teams will compete in district championships Nov. 14 in Salt Lake City's Rose Park Golf Course on Redwood Road.

The men will start at 11 a.m. and the women at noon.

The meet will decide who qualifies for nationals. Five of the nation's top 20 teams will participate, including BYU, Weber St., Wyoming, Northern Arizona and San Diego St.

YU faces UTEP in showdown

AWN LARSEN

er this weekend there will be two legitimate contenders for Western Athletic Conference n — Wyoming and the winner of YU-UTEP game.

Saturday at noon the Cougars on the Miners in El Paso, Texas at may be one of the most excit- AC games of the season.

EP, the WAC's Cinderella , has beaten opponents Colorado , Hawaii, San Diego State, New co and Utah, with their only conference loss coming at the hands of Air Force.

And BYU, the traditional powerhouse of the WAC, has prevailed over WAC foes New Mexico, Hawaii, Air Force and San Diego State, losing to Wyoming, the only undefeated WAC team.

Many fans may recall the unforgetable meeting between BYU and UTEP two years ago when the Cougars, coming off their National Championship season, lost to the Miners in what was deemed as "college football's upset of the year."

UTEP has accumulated impressive statistics so far this year. The Miners currently lead the WAC in scoring defense (17.8 points per game) and in pass defense (5.2 yards per pass attempt), and is second in in the WAC in total defense and scoring offense.

According to BYU Head Coach LaVell Edwards, "We have our work cut out for us at El Paso. I've been saying this all year — (John) Harvey is the premier back in the league, and maybe even the western part of the country. He had over 200 yards against Utah, and that has to be the number one goal for us."

Edwards is wise to be wary of Harvey. The Miner running back is second in all-purpose running in the WAC with 143.44 yards per game. Harvey also leads the conference in rushing.

The game will be carried live by KSL Radio (1160) and KSL-TV (Chan.5).

UTEP isn't so good, say sports editors

Welcome to the editor's predictions!

Last week Sports Editor Dawn Larsen creamed her assistant Eric Goodell. She picked eight of ten, while he got five correct.

This week, Goodell is hoping a higher force has inspired his predictions.

Here are this week's picks:

BYU at UTEP

UTEP has a good win-loss record, but it hasn't played many tough teams. BYU will win in El Paso behind the passing of quarterback Sean Covey.

Air Force at New Mexico

The Falcons will cruise.

Wyoming at Utah

Goodell hates Wyoming, so he pulls for the Utes. Larsen says the Cowboys will whip Utah.

Colorado St. at SDSU

Goodell picks the Rams in a close one. Larsen goes with the Aztecs.

(16) Indiana at (13) Michigan St.

This should be a tight one. Larsen thinks the Spartans, Goodell goes with the Hoosiers.

(11) Alabama at (7) Notre Dame

Goodell predicts Alabama will squeak out the win. Larsen says the opposite.

(12) Auburn at (8) Georgia

Larsen picks the home team, but Goodell think the Tigers will rebound.

(20) Arkansas at (19) Texas A&M

It looks like a toss-up, but Larsen and Goodell go with Texas A&M.

Washington at (5) UCLA

UCLA has a lot of injuries this week, but both think the Bruins will still pull out the victory.

(15) Penn St. at Pitt

Goodell goes with the upset, picking Pitt. Larsen disagrees.

Better Business Bureau has 75th birthday

By SIMONE S. JACKSON
Universe Staff Writer

Gov. Norman Bangerter has declared November "Better Business Bureau Month" in recognition of the 75th anniversary of the Better Business Bureau.

President Reagan has also acknowledged the anniversary with a letter of congratulations to all those involved.

In the letter, Reagan said, "Your efforts have truly perpetuated the legacy of good business ethics found throughout our history and so ably advocated by your founder, Samuel C. Dobbs."

In 1912, Dobbs, as an attorney for Coca-Cola, proposed cleaning up the advertising industry to protect consumers, said Mary-Lou Beckwith, the director of communications at the Better Business Bureau of Utah.

The Better Business Bureau has grown, serving more than 10 million customers in 1986 alone, said Bill Beadle, president of the Utah bureau.

The bureau assisted the consumers in the truth of advertising, dispute resolution and charitable solicitation review.

The Better Business Bureau is a self-regulatory agency funded by memberships of local businesses.

In 1986, Utah received 5,600 complaints and 55,000 consumer inquiries through its toll-free, statewide telephone lines, said Beadle.

In connection with the anniversary, the Better Business Bureau of Utah will travel to schools and senior citizen centers, said Beckwith.

It will tell students of consumer responsibility such as looking at and responding to advertising. It will also discuss concerns such as buying a used car and signing contracts, Beckwith said.

Students can protect themselves by "investigating before they invest," said Beckwith.

Students should explore the background of any purchase they are becoming involved in, she said.

"Plan out your purchases, don't be an impluse buyer when you first enter the marketplace," she said.

A consumer concern to be discussed with senior citizens is fraudulent claims, said Beckwith.

Bike sale to help Sub for Santa kids

Used bicycles will be for sale Saturday in Orem to help raise money for Sub for Santa.

All the proceeds will go to needy families at Christmas time. "Not a dime goes to office expenses," said Marcelino Archuleta, a member of the Provo/Orem Chamber of Commerce, sponsor of the event.

The bikes were recovered by Orem City police and unclaimed by their owners after at least six months.

"Some of them (the bikes) are in pretty good shape," Archuleta said.

Bikes in poor condition will be sold for low prices so one good bike can be put together from several, he said.

Archuleta said he keeps at least 20 of the best bikes to give away to children who are in Sub for Santa families.

Most bikes will have a marked price, but he will also dicker about the price, he said.

The sixth annual sale will be at 64 W. Center St. from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m.

We have the most beautiful rings in the world.

Diamonds purchased on the international market at centers like Antwerp usually make a number of stops en route to Utah. They are passed from buyers to any number of brokers, distributors and dealers. And each person involved makes some profit on the transaction.

When you buy a diamond from another jeweler the price you pay reflects the mark-up built in along the way.

At Sierra-West we buy from the largest main source cutters in the world and that along with a lower mark-up reflects a significantly lower price!

Sierra-West diamonds are different only in the price you pay for them. To prove it, here is our guarantee to you. Get a gemological report from Los Angeles or New York on your purchase, if it varies more than 1-grade per quality we would replace the stone.
Plus, Lifetime Guarantee against defects.

Disaster preceded by complacency

NASA tightened since shuttle explosion, says director

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — NASA Administrator James Fletcher says the space agency was complacent and its management disrupted by personnel turnovers in the months prior to the Challenger disaster.

Fletcher, in a University of Utah address, said neither problem was directly to blame for the Jan. 28, 1986, explosion that destroyed the Challenger and killed its seven-member crew. But he said the investigation that followed the tragedy has produced a stronger space program.

"There was complacency that had leaked in. We have tightened up the organization. We replaced a lot of people," Fletcher said. "Nobody left that we didn't encourage to leave."

Fletcher, a former president of the University of Utah, said new directors had been appointed at five of NASA's nine space centers.

Fletcher listed the personnel changes as one of two major steps taken to improve NASA since he was appointed to lead the agency following the Challenger explosion.

The other, he said, involved more than 200 technical changes in the shuttle and its solid-fuel booster rockets, including the redesign of the joints that connect the booster's four segments.

A presidential commission blamed the disaster on a faulty booster joint that allowed hot gases to leak from the rocket and ignite the shuttle's main fuel tank.

Fletcher said all but one of the changes have been implemented, although not all have been fully tested.

The change still incomplete is the installation of an escape system in the shuttle itself.

NASA officials have not decided whether to have the escape system in place for the shuttle's next flight, tentatively scheduled for June 1988, Fletcher said.

Fletcher, who directed NASA from 1971 to 1977, was called back to the agency in the weeks that followed the Challenger disaster. He said he initially refused, but was persuaded to accept the job after receiving a personal call from President Reagan.

Defense rests case for two in Berg trial

DENVER (AP) — Defense attorneys on Thursday attempted to discredit the testimony of defendant Jean Craig's daughter, Zillah Craig, as the trial of four people accused in the 1984 slaying of controversial radio talk show host Alan Berg continued in federal court.

Marie Craig, formerly of Laramie, Wyo., said if her granddaughter, Zillah Craig, told the jury she loved her mother, "I would have to say it was a lie."

Zillah Craig had testified last week that her lover, the late Order leader Robert Mathews, told her of a plot by his white supremacist group to kill Berg and that he planned to send her mother, Jean Craig, to Denver to trail Berg.

Zillah Craig had told the jury that despite her damaging testimony, she loved her mother. But Marie Craig said her granddaughter "very often expressed hatred for her mother" as she was growing up. She also testified that Zillah suffered depression, once threatened to kill herself and was placed in a state hospital when she was 17.

Defense attorneys for Jean Craig and David Lane rested their cases early Thursday afternoon, but testimony for defendants Richard Scutari and Bruce Pierce continued.

The four are members of The Order and are charged with violating the civil rights of Berg, 50, by killing him. There is no murder charge in federal statutes. They all are serving federal racketeering sentences stemming from a 1985 trial in Seattle.

Authorities have identified Mathews as the fifth member of the team that killed Berg.

He died Dec. 8, 1984, following a standoff with authorities after an illumination flare ignited his hideout at Whidbey Island, Wash.

The grandmother said Thursday she had taken care of Zillah Craig frequently from the time she was seven months old until after Zillah Craig bore Mathews' child.

Defense attorneys spent Thursday afternoon attempting to show that witnesses could not positively identify men they saw near Berg's condominium prior to this killing as being the defendants in the trial.

Lee Library evacuated in fire scare

By LORI HARDY
and R.J. THOMPSON
Universe Staff Writers

At 5:30 p.m. Thursday, a smoke detector on the first floor of the Harold B. Lee Library sounded, activating the fire alarm.

According to Joy Gardner, a junior who works at the circulation desk, the fire was reported and the library was evacuated about 5:45 p.m.

The control panel in the library office indicated a fire on the first floor.

The security team arrived, but found no fire on the first floor.

"According to the control panel board, we have a fire in the building, we just don't know where it is," said Randy Olsen, assistant librarian.

The security officers searched the remainder of the library and smelled smoke on the fourth and fifth floors and on the ground level at the outside, northeast corner of the building.

The cause of the incident was a melted ballast, the starter of a fluorescent light.

"We lifted a ballast in the library science lab and discovered it had melted. Once the electrician disconnected that, everything reprogrammed, the smoke alarms reset themselves, and everything's fine," said Haybron Adams, reference librarian.

The smell of smoke was carried to the fourth and fifth levels through the air conditioning system.

Library workers collected personal belongings left behind during the evacuation and returned them after the owners identified the articles and the floor where their items were left.

Articles left behind can be claimed at the general reference desk on the main level until Monday.

The library reopened at 7:12 p.m., but security officers remained behind to insure the return of belongings to their proper owners.
